SPACE IS THE PLACE: MAKING MAGIC IN THE EFL CLASSROOM

face-to-face session

The real joy of teaching lies in the unexpected turns that lessons suddenly take, the stories, jokes and banter that suddenly burst forth from our students. Learning how to create the space in which this kind of magic can occur takes time and requires a keen focus on language. In this talk, I'll be unpicking the process.

HUGH DELLAR

Hugh Dellar is a London-based teacher and teacher trainer with over twenty years experience in the field. He has taught all ages and levels, both in the UK and also in Indonesia, where he lived for four years. He worked for University of Westminster for 18 years, but is now the co-founder of Lexical Lab and has recently co-written the methodology book Teaching Lexically for Delta publishing. He is the co-author of two five-level General English series, Innovations and Outcomes, both published by National Geographic Learning, as well as numerous papers and articles for many ELT publications.

Hugh has given teacher training and development sessions in over twenty countries including Brazil, Mexico, Peru, Argentina, Spain, Russia, Italy, Japan and Thailand. He has spoken on such wide-ranging topics as the nature of English as a Lingua Franca, the uses and abuses of corpora, approaches to teaching grammar and vocabulary, as well as many others.

MICHAEL LACEY FREEMAN

I have been working in the field of English Language Teaching for nearly 30 years, both as a University teacher and ELT author. I am also a storyteller and have travelled extensively the world to tell my stories, and spread the message that words are powerful. I have written a number of ELT course books for major publishers such as Oxford University Press and Pearson and twelve of my graded readers have been published, five of which have won international awards. In 2017 I was invited to be on the board of directors of the Extensive Reading Foundation, an organisation that promotes extensive reading around the world. I have also spoken as a plenary speaker in a variety of different contexts including the Oxford National Conferences, universities in Japan, Indonesia, and Italy, and have been a part of the OUP Read On project since 2019. I have also produced a Podcast called TeatFive which is available free of charge on iTunes and Spotify, and was promoted by Oxford University Press.

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE FOR ENGLISH TEACHERS

Teaching English: Opening new Horizons!

80 MINUTES WORKSHOP
FRIDAY MARCH 31ST, 2023

14.20-15.50

DOES PRACTICE MAKE PERFECT?

online session

Providing practice of new language is one of the key aspects of language lessons, which makes it possible for students not just to understand the new language, but be able to use it. Modern coursebooks provide a range of ready activities and guidance, but does only completing coursebook tasks lead to a desirable outcome? It is essential to understand how language practice works and how to to organise it so that students end up incorporating this language in their everyday life.

In this talk, we will focus on the stages of practicing new language (grammar, vocabulary and functions) and:

- clarify what makes language practice effective;
- discuss what types of activities are there to encourage students to use new language;
- explore how to skilfully manage practice activities.

The talk will be helpful for teaching professionals with some experience of teaching but will also be useful for experienced teachers who would like to structure and deepen understanding of how to make the most of language practice.

ANDRII PIGARIEV

Andrii is an English language teacher and teacher trainer with over 17 years of experience in the field. He has taught English in various contexts: secondary school, General English, English for Specific Purposes and Exam English. His eagerness to take teaching English as a profession was shaped in early school years and turned into a series of decisions later. Andrii obtained an MA in the English Philology and completed international teaching qualifications (CELTA & Delta), which led into becoming a teacher trainer and CELTA tutor. Being enthusiastic about sharing his expertise and passion about the language and teaching, Andrii works as a teacher, DOS, CELTA and CELT-S trainer at Grade Education Centre. He also conducts methodology workshops and webinars and participates in events for teachers and presents at conferences. Apart from professional interests, Andrii is keen on psychology, volleyball, ice-skating and local travelling.

ENGLISH IS A SIMPLE LANGUAGE

online session

English has developed a bad reputation for being difficult to understand. The grammar is too complicated and too irregular - or so people say.

But in this workshop we'll look at English grammar differently, and we'll see that the underlying principles of the language combine in elegant ways to provide meaning. We'll work together to build a new, clearer understanding of one area of English grammar in particular - the conditional system.

Christopher Walker has been an English teacher for over a decade, and specialises in teaching grammar in a simple, communicative way.

TRANSLANGUAGING'

ROSARIO VERRASTRO

Rosario is an ESL/EFL teacher and a teacher trainer. She has worked in education for over 20 years. She has taught students of different ages and different backgrounds with more than one mother tongue. She has specialized as a higher educator in ICT. She is an entrepreneur in charge of a language school. She's currently working for a national programme which teaches students from different parts of the country. She is a literature lover and passionate educator which has led her to seek alternative ways of approaching language teaching.

In gauging the success of English acquisition in the second language classroom, the focus has historically been placed on approaches designed by Western theorists excluding the learner's mother tongue. This approach is still supported by the ESL/EFL industry which perpetuates the myth of the native speaker. However, the world is evolving toward a diverse direction which requires a more inclusive view.

Monolingualism and nativespeakearism are obsolete concepts. Therefore, translanguaging arises as the adequate approach leading to the acquisition of an L2 from a glocal perspective. Its value cannot be underestimated.

This session is intended to be a call to action to rethink the role of educators, resignify the content of mainstream English books and to use more meaningful teaching methods. The aim of this presentation is to vindicate learners' cultural background to create a purposeful connection with the language to be learnt.

ANDREA BEATRIZ COLLADOS

Andrea is an ESL/EFL teacher, global educator, lecturer, intrepid traveler, and photographer. The many years of teaching English and Spanish in Argentina, the USA, Andorra, China, Japan, Sudan, and Germany helped her develop a more global and multicultural perspective over the implications of being an educator. She has recently graduated from the MA Las Américas / The Americas at FAU in Germany and she's currently working as a freelancer focusing on B2B and also teaching general English to learners from across the globe.

IS CHATGPT USEFUL FOR TEACHERS?

online session

The recent developments in technology and the impact of the COVID pandemic have resulted in unprecedented shifts in education and such changes have led to the need for educators to adapt their teaching practices and face new challenges in the classroom. Among the many innovations is the potential use of chatGPT in language education. This presentation aims to explore what chatGPT is and how it can be used by teachers to facilitate material development, lesson planning or even help in the pursuit of personal endeavours.

CARLOS LINDADE

Carlos Lindade is a Portuguese-Canadian professional with extensive experience in the field of ELT (English Language Teaching), heavily involved in the training of pre and in-service EFL teachers and in the development of coursebooks for Portuguese students of English (U Dare 9, 2015; Stars 4, 2016). He is an active member of the Portuguese Association of Teachers of English (APPI) and of also a member of the Centre for English, Translation and Anglo-Portuguese Studies (CETAPS). Games are an important part in the structure of a class, but sometimes it can be very possible for teachers to avoid them considering they have a great chance of turning the class into a chaos and the lesson plan into an organisational disaster. Games do possess an intrinsic capacity to perform the task of accelerating learning, but they need to be used with a specific purpose in order to facilitate learning and make the process of learning a pleasurable experience for both the learner and the teacher. Games do not require much preparation and with a bit of creativity and a focus, a teacher has a very useful tool to engage and teach students of all ages. Give games a second chance!

 ALEXANDRA MOTRESCU

As an English teacher and founder of ALMO New Learning Concept, language centre in Romania, I have created a strong community that strives to accelerate learning and self-development through a pedagogical system that allows teachers to be creative, independent and have a framework whilst preserving the natural desire of children, teenagers and adults to learn and progress. I have developed teams of teachers, created a teaching and learning community and have actively involved to innovate the way English language is taught to the present generations in order to create future adults that are fluent and strong communicators.

Every teacher knows that professional development can be the key to unlocking new opportunities, boosting your confidence, and bringing new ideas to your classroom. Moreover, most states actually require a minimum number of annual continuing education hours for you to maintain your right to teach. After all, every school wants its teachers to update their knowledge, learn innovative teaching techniques and maintain their enthusiasm.

But, let's be real, the cost for teacher continuing education can vary widely, and with so many options out there, it can be tough to know where to start.

We can help you embark on a journey to teaching excellence. For the ultimate convenience and flexibility, you can take teacher-training courses online and complete the work around your own schedule.

Join us and find out where to start, how long it should take, what to take with you, how to plan every step of the journey and what these steps should be.

Learning a foreign language is incredible fun! It arouses and satisfies the learners' curiosity, opens horizons and windows to foreign cultures and faraway countries ... Wow! And yet, it is so often accompanied by much fear and shyness when it comes to reading, writing or speaking this new language in the classroom.

Evolutionary Pedagogy® comes up with motion exercises, specific easy movements that unblock fears and blockades in stressful learning situations. They foster concentration and help to improve the reading and writing process. Moreover, they enhance speaking confidence by creating the fun factor indispensable to language learning.

I'm going to present the most effective tools of Evolutionary Pedagogy® so that you can immediately use them in your EFL classroom.

BARBARA SEEBER

Barbara Seeber was born in South Tyrol, the most northern region of Italy, where a German dialect is widely-spoken as mother tongue. She studied French, English and American studies at the University of Innsbruck (Austria) and took part in various literature translation projects (e.g. "E. E. Cummings coming into German"). She then started teaching English at middle school, when it was introduced as a subject there in 2000. In 2007 it was also transferred to primaries, so since then Seeber has been teaching EFL to young learners from 9-13 years. She is a certified Evolutionary Pedagogist® who locates and dissolves pupils' blockades, fears and learning difficulties by embedding simple yet specific motion exercises in her teaching.

face-to-face session

Increasingly implemented in secondary and tertiary education, Backward Design is an approach to course planning that enables instruction to be more goal-focused and effective by emphasizing understanding, performance, and transfer. It does this by having teachers identify their course's desired results, determine acceptable evidence of learning, and then design a progressive sequence of learning experiences to achieve the course's learning objectives. This presentation provides an introduction to Backward Design and how it helps instructors clarify their teaching practice, creates scaffolded assessments and activities, and encourages student buy-in.

NATHAN MEYER

Nathan Meyer is an assistant professor at the University of Utah Asia Campus in Incheon, South Korea where he teaches writing and rhetoric and serves as chair of the Faculty Development Committee which provides ongoing professional development and pedagogical support. He earned his BA and MA from California State Universities, teaching certificates from Cambridge, Harvard, and Duke. Before joining the University of Utah, he lectured and developed courses for universities in the United States, China, and Europe. From 2014-17 he was a US State Dept. English Language Fellow in Serbia and Moldova where he was a university lecturer, curriculum developer, and teacher trainer. In continuing collaborations with the State Dept., he has built media literacy programs in Ukraine, consulted on public speaking program development in Turkey, and designed teacher training programs in Serbia, Slovakia, and Moldova.

IRINA POMAZANOVSCHI

Irina Pomazanovschi has been teaching English since 2005, but don't let her experience fool you - she's always finding new ways to make learning fun. For seven years, she ran the Resource Center for English Teachers and Students, developing CPD programs and training teachers. Since 2015, she's been taking her talents online, teaching adults and young adults how to nail job interviews and ace their exams in English. When Irina is not teaching, she is all about building communities of language learners. She runs a summer book club and a speaking club for English teachers in Moldova, where they can chat, share ideas, and have a laugh or two.
